

Roots & Resources: Reclaiming & Reconnecting with Our Germanic Heritage & Folkways

I recently suggested to several online groups that focus on Germanic/White heritage that they set up a RESOURCES section amid their project, but nobody cared to respond, other than one person who "disliked" my comment! So, following the adage "If you want something done, do it yourself," I have decided to build a basic Resources list myself; hence, what follows. Since I'm not terribly proficient in online webpage construction and my time for such activity is limited, this will be, at least to start, a minimalist offering. I am hoping other Resources will surface over time to make this a truly useful, educational and helpful Resource. Judging from my own inner urging and that of some of my friends/relatives, there is a hunger in USA for this sort of information and access to our long-lost (or never yet connected with) ROOTS to our Germanic heritage and folkways. So here's hoping we can address that inner hunger and provide some healthy nourishment. And it goes without saying that this area under discussion is very painful for many, so I hope my sincerity and concern for everyone's sensitivities also comes through in this effort. Please let me know if there are any problems or errors herein. Many thanks. Vielen dank!

INITIAL Roots & Resources Categories:

Below are links to some items I have found helpful to enhance my understanding and appreciation for my own heritage, so for starters, to 'prime the pump,' the following categories will be the basic structure of this R&R Project, with a few added as time goes on:

Arts & Aesthetics
